When we were Freshmen we were always happy. That is axiomatic. We were even more blithe than in those childhood days that formed such a reservoir of material for our themes. Of course, we were not always so sure of our blessed state as, looking back upon it, we are now. Those very themes we dashed off so merrily between eleven and four of a wintry night sometimes caused a passing sigh and tears (happy tears we know them now to be!) Could anything be jollier than to find ourselves back in the Vil, shivering in a steamer rug and pouring forth "My first impressions of Wellesley?"

And Trig. There is a tradition that Freshmen hate Trig, and we tried valiantly to live up to this good old custom; but wasn't it really fun to totter down after midyears and find that the anticipated slip was not awaiting us? Or if it was—but it never was, of course, for we were not only a very happy class but a lucky and clever one.

The weather, even, was always wonderful our Freshman year. If the sun didn't actually shine every day, it rained only to give us a howling good time trying to balance our books, ourselves, and our umbrellas on a bicycle while we shook with laughter, or it snowed to let us wear our galoshes, a fascinating novelty to many of us.

We shall never forget the fun it was to plow through the drifts in that famous early morning sprint to the Dana Gym, where we shiveringly assented to "By our fruits ye shall know us." And wasn't the ice storm exciting? No lights at all but candles, and trees crashing all around, and preparation cuts in everything. Not that the last made very much difference, because we never had to spend much time studying then. We usually employed ourselves going to Boston or the movies, or sitting around talking, or playing jokes on each other, or eating at Miss Coombs', whom we so far ate out of house and home that she retired at the end of the season. Which brings us to our amazing health.

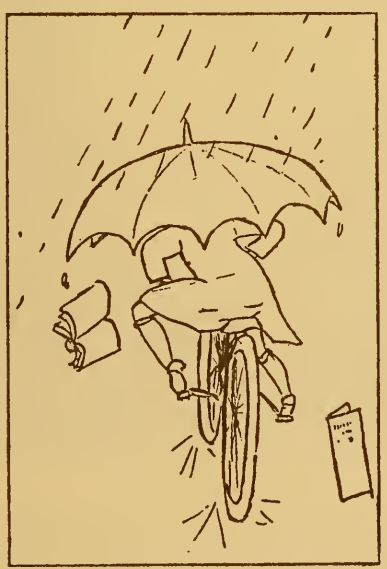
There never was a more robust class than we were Freshman year. The weakest among us could eat three Wellesley Specials at the Tea Room, stop by the Hole in the Wall for a hot dog on the way home, and then sink easily into a night of refreshing sleep. We used to have the best time making a lunch of chocolate peps at the Campus exchange after discarding, in the arrogance of youth, the bag lunches since immortalized in the Free Press column of the News. Some few of us did go to the Infirmary during the year, but that was only the occasion for more girlish merriment. Our friends all sent us hundreds of notes and flowers, and if we had a room on the fire escape, was there ever a thrill like the thrill of horror when our friends climbed cautiously up and thrust their heads into the window at the moment Doctor Raymond was taking our pulse? It was the exuberance of perfect health and muscle-coordination that led us to smash up the G. L. R. and permanently disable several of the Sophomores who tempted us too far, and there was also Rusty's recent presidency to inflame us.



It was during this year that our brawn to brain ratio was established. (See page 123 for further data.)

Indeed, it didn't make us a bit less happy that we never had the least idea of what was current in Wellesley's exclusive intellectual and political circles. A few of us stopped to gape at the stump speakers, 'Liz Woody and Dash Williams, whose vehement denunciations produced a very negligible result on our embryo brains. (See Evolu, verse 5010.)

The opening and the first historic closing of the Brooks Room were more directly important to us. We loved the nice comfortable chairs and a few of us had even gone so far as to begin reading one of the books—perhaps the very book which disappeared. Who knows?

This concern about the Brooks Room, however, may have been due in part to our wonderful sense of morality. For though simple we were good. None of us turned a single hair when we endorsed the ideas of the "moral squad" as to petting, smoking, drinking, etc. Each of us knew that her "strength was as the strength of ten because her heart was pure."

Looking back upon it we cannot recall a single test of muscle in which we were not victorious. We won field day, we won hockey, we won golf at 100%, and we doubtless won everything else.

Anyone persuaded that our class in the year 1922 absented itself, as a unit, from these cloistered parts, might hold an excellent brief. So far as visible sign or tangible memory goes, there is little to persuade the unbiased historian that a sophomore year existed; yet there was one.

We have this from the statements of good citizens and sane; we feel it must be so, although our inquiries have uniformly failed to evoke anything that might be termed proof; all that the editors can do is to present to the public a digest of evidence, accumulated at a considerable outlay of time and notary public fees. It follows:

Q. Did we have a Sophomore year?

A. Did we.....? O—don't be silly.

Q. Kindly refrain from personal calumny. What happened Sophomore year, if any?

A. Why.....I really don't remember..... of course there was one.....I have such a poor memory.....

Q. Kindly endeavor to exercise it, such as it is.

A. O—I know. We all lived on campus. We ate our meals at the Blue Dragon. We were simply terrible to the Freshmen; why, one time we hazed them by making them wear their hair in the most unbecoming way .....and another time we serenaded them. And we gave them a Prom, but no one was seriously injured. And our class rings finally came.

Q. Council requests that this evidence be ruled out. These items are generic to all sophomore years. Kindly name one happening peculiar to the class of 1925.

A. Hunter was our class president. And.....once the Freshmen came and put salt in all our beds as revenge for some girlish prank of ours. And then, there was daytime registration, you see. The discarded slips got to be a serious problem. They used to be stored in any wooden buildings that were handy and the college counted on periodic fires to dispose of them; but around this time, arson became one of the less popular crimes, so the slips just accumulated and finally all of them were taken to the dump by the railroad, and C. G. abolished daytime registration.

Q. Does the witness mean to suggest any connection between this occurrence and the subterranean blaze in the dump?

A. Certainly, the slips just naturally expected to be burned, so they combusted, and.....

Q. This commission does not deal with fantasies. Kindly stick to the point in hand. Have you any other proof that 1925 had a sophomore year?

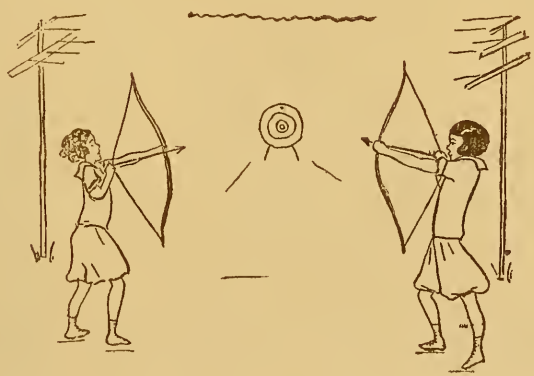
A. O..... we had a telegraphic archery match with Cornell and we won it.....and the faculty gave a play, Treasure Island.....but I can't remember anything else.

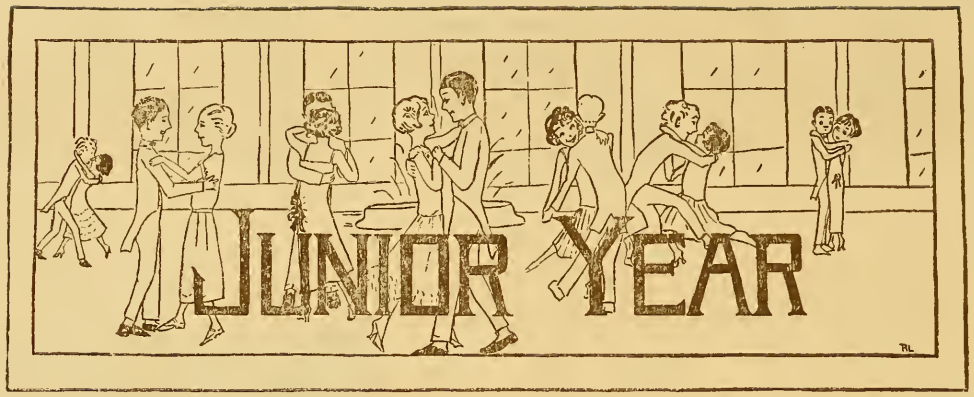
The above symposium is all we have to offer. The editors considered consulting accounts in previous Legendas, and building up from them a possible sophomore year for our own class, which would perhaps have been the most economical and scientific course.

Instead of this, however, we have determined to leave the reader with the question unanswered. Is it possible, we ask, for a class to have no sophomore year?

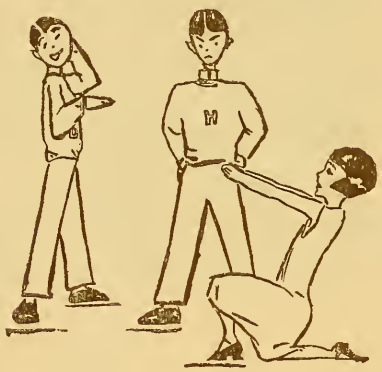
Or, is sophomore year, as an historic event, perhaps, a failure.? Should it be abolished?

Having thus neatly phrased our problem we leave our public to solve it.





The class, in the fall of 1923, turned with its usual vim to the business of being Jolly Juniors, and awoke to find itself languid. It was hardened to being a younger generation, a decadent, wild, and generally naughty generation. But languid! In surging waves protest stirred and rose; 1925 was seeing red. Within a month it was Dorm Dancing until eleven!

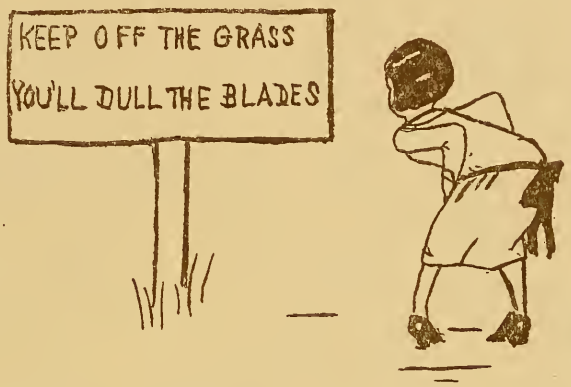


Languid. An Economics society sprang into being. An outraged Forum protested. War with the clash of passions. To whom does economics belong? No one could say, but the college in its heart of hearts knew that Mr. Opie warranted a society.

The seed of revolt which had ever lurked in the seemingly stolid bosom of the Debating Club burst into flower. A call was sent to the world of men. Harvard declined, Dartmouth said, "Sorry," but Bates came. (Ed. Note: Since Wellesley unfortunately lost, we leave this more anti-climactic aspect of our theme.)

The class now turned from obvious self-expression to more subtle methods. The Bok Peace Plan appeared on the horizon, heralded on the Wellesley campus by widely distributed ballot boxes, posters, and those passionate journalistic outpourings for which the News is famed. Despite all this, Wellesley was quite unmoved; nobody paid any attention to Mr. Levermore (antiquarians will recall that he was the winner of the prize). It is our pride as historians to bring to light this scornful aloofness, lest posterity be misled by the published statistics (a 7—1 in favor vote), which mysteriously appeared, although nothing is known to have been dropped into the boxes except a solitary dime attributed to the charitable instincts of an unknown Freshman. (Note: The dime is on exhibition in Farnsworth Art Museum, where it may be seen any day, aptly labelled, "Recent Acquisition.")

Here we pause and hang our heads. In the spring of the year, there came a blight, truly a boll-weevil of administrative wit. See illustration at right.



None the less, there were no riots, no noteworthy murders; no one seized these fragile boards and crushed them beneath indignant feet; no one threw them into the lake; no attempt was made to punish the perpetrators. To this day they are at large in a defenceless society.

In this year occurred the fourth and fifth historic closings of the Brooks Room, and the eighteenth annual Quarantine.

The dissolving mists of Autumn revealed, just aft of the laundry, in its completed glory, the quaint Wellesley-Gothic of the new palais de plaisir. Of course, it must be christened from the heart of the college that had yearned for it, so there was a name competition, in the course of which were suggested: Harding Hall, Commonwealth Hall, College Hall, Pendleton Hall, Parthenon Hall, Palmer Hall, Baliol Hall, Cyprian Hall, Pentelicon Hall, Beacon Hall, Barlow Hall, Pendleton Guild-Hall, Pendleton Assembly-Hall, Unity Building, Collegian Hall, Wellesley Center, Alumnae Center, Play-House, The Assembly, Pendleton Play-House, Levanadrome, Wellesley Play-House, Parnassus.

Naturally, it was called Alumnae Hall.

However, an era of luxury was ushered in, with the new ball room for the Prom, and a concert hall demanding unanimous evening dress. A few sentimental tears fell for the Barn; it became a dormitory, and its soul flitted to the select Elysium inhabited by Miss Coombs, College Hall, and one or two others.

In conclusion, we note that:

1. Mildred Wetten, having sampled all sweets to date, this year represented Wellesley at an Intercollegiate Conference, and was class president.
2. Everyone bobbed her hair.
3. The Valentine record was broken.
4. Mrs. Gardner again graciously opened her galleries to the college during spring vacation.
5. Jehovah through his prophet, C. G., decreed a part-time Sabbath,—motoring from 12:30 to 7:30 became legal.

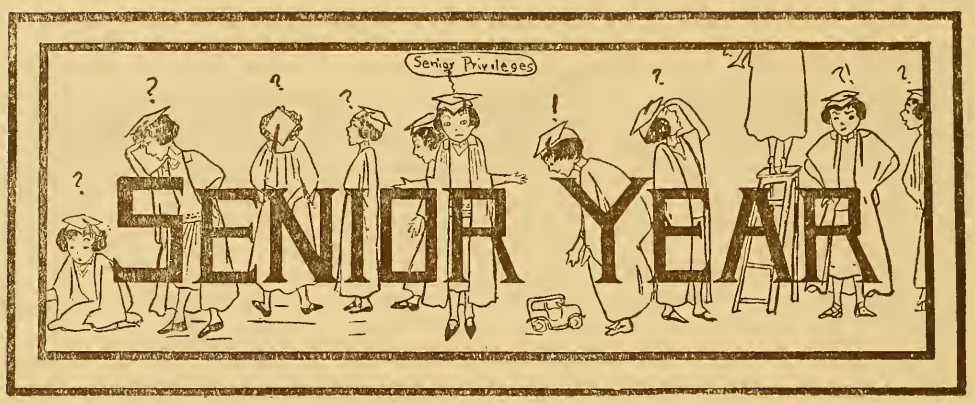
6. The Faculty had a Baby Exhibit, and everyone said, "Who would have thought it?"

7. There were hardly any fires.

8. The college, by another momentous straw vote, decided that Prohibition was a very good thing.

9. Though wholly ignorant of the daring outcries of the Heretics Board, an alumna of Youngstown, Ohio, said the college had gone I. W. W.



Greatly impressed with its own dignity, '25 rushed back to Wellesley in September, registered with all haste, and donned its caps and gowns. The matter of chokers was not so easy, but by dint of elaborate oesophageal gymnastics every member at last adjusted her full regalia. Perhaps other things occurred those first few days but all that one remembers are the many walks around campus in order that the rest of the college might see how really important one was. Clothes do not make the man, but a choker makes a Senior! By the time of Freshman Vaudeville we had become so used to our exalted state that we consented to relax a little and could even smile over the sight of several of our Vill Seniors impersonating Freshmen.

Senior privileges turned out to be wholly nebulous excepting for certain four-wheeled vehicles of dubious origin and uncertain age in which we have observed certain members of our august body transporting themselves about the college.

In spite of these distractions the academic took its calm and ordered way, to be broken open by the formation of the Community Chorus. Immediately '25 felt called on to show its superior ability in singing. We even came to look upon it as something which we'd thought of and organized for the college. We were particularly good on such selections as "O Miss Liza" and "O Missis O'Grady." In fact we knew that the Chorus could not do without us when it came to the refrains. Politics early engrossed our attention as a class. Questionnaires sent to our members revealed the fact that we all voted just like our fathers. The genuine article being too remote, it behooved us to carry on a campaign of our own. No such torch light procession was ever seen as that which wound its way from Barn to Tower and our dark horse was impeccable, being both black and equine. Surely no other campaign could produce a Coolidge and La-Follette who calmly walked off with their arms around each other.

Politics were not half so interesting as cross-word puzzles, however. Our whole attention was soon concentrated on verticals and horizontals. We were so busy finding a ten-letter word meaning political head that we forgot to inquire who had been elected president. It is said that one Phi Bete took The Children's Cross-word Puzzle Book to the initiation at President Pendleton's house. Also computations have been made showing that of the 333 students seen using Webster in one day 2.2% were looking up unfamiliar terms discovered in text books, 97.8% were engaged in hunting an especially elusive seven letter word meaning Wellesley.

As the chief events of Senior Year we recall the stew dinners, the new elevator in Founders Hall which has not yet made its first trip, and the winter carnival held on a bright spring day when the weather man had promised snow and ice. Perhaps to this should be added the fire in Cazenove Hall when some of us at last got a chance to try the descent by rope which we all learned Freshman year. That is, those of us who had not long ago used our ropes for better purposes.

Items such as class organization, pageants and Semi-Centennial Fund attracted our notice along the way. On the whole, however, we left the first to Quig, our Senior President, the second to Ina and Lilith and the third to Hunter, all of whom engineered them with great fluency.

Great hordes of us got culture by conning the art of the world in two semesters. The others covered mankind's musical production. Thus we went forth to be ornaments to the picture galleries and concert halls of two continents. For the writer of this report feels that it is not vain optimism to predict that a decent number of us contrived to lay hold of sixty points and thus, in due course, be graduated.

JAUNTILY attired in blue bloomers, the inevitable white sweater and sneakers without which no one can enter that select quarter of the college known as the Hygiene Department, '25 has swaggered through its four years. Not often has any other costume dared compete with this favorite, excluding always the debased Doric tendency of the crew outfit and the insouciant Peck & Peck of our golfers. Four years have dimmed the original whiteness of our sweaters to a vague grey; of many there remain only a few shreds of wool supporting a wan W; yet from their shattered state, one may learn the athletic achievements of '25.

Back in the dark ages of Freshman year, we astonished the college (including ourselves) by winning first place in hockey, golf and tennis. We really shouldn't have done it; but having made one blunder, we continued. Several daring members had the temerity to make 'varsity teams; and when Wellesley scored one goal against the English hockey team, we were certain that it was due to the four freshman players.

Even the long tramps to Mary Hemenway on winter afternoons, or the still colder showers awaiting us there could not chill our athletic ardor. The gym meet between Freshmen and Sophomores was, of course, a victory for '25. The award was supposedly based on the amazing proficiency in marching and apparatus work shown by the entire class; but, in reality the judges were fascinated by the contortions of the Blacks, who tied themselves into knots on the ropes and slid down head first. Later on in the year, we won the spring sports competition.

Sophomore year we spent our time developing pedal dexterity. The two inch head lines of the papers informed the world that Wellesley girls not only walked over eight miles a day but that they had, as a body, adopted foot writing. Many hours were daily devoted to this art, in order to gain both speed and skill. The shoe stores of the village seriously contemplated removal because the strictly orthopedic dicta of the Hygiene Department ruled the fashion.

But there were too many embryonic Lenglens and Colletts among us for us to be content for long with these minor sports. We turned our attention seriously to our deeper purposes; and as a result, Field Day was won. Basketball, golf, tennis and hockey were easy victories. Our reputation was made. Subsequent years saw two more Field Days won by '25. It had become a habit with us.

In our Junior Year, longing for new opponents, we suggested inter-collegiate athletics, in some mild form. All the college approved. Our sporting poets had visions of a great stadium filling the meadow. The girl who never missed a football game dreamed of entertaining old friends on home ground. In fact, the entire student body, excepting a few obscure hop-scotch addicts, were in favor of the plan, and it seemed near to becoming a reality. But alas for those who hoped, the Academic Council was not its customary sympathetic self. It offered, as substitutes, a course in fencing and an opportunity to repeat Hygiene 121 to any desiring additional exercise.

Senior year our place has been unquestioned. We triumphed at Field Day with a score of 65.8 points out of a possible 70; that is, we won first place in everything but golf. Our crew developed remarkably in spite of its costume. First place in speed and form is its record. Our archers would make successful yeomen. Have we not observed that they defeated Cornell, by wire? As to our baseball, basketball, hockey, tennis and volleyball teams—each is perfect in its sphere. They vary only in the type of ball they use. Our riding team is equally proficient without any ball whatever.

This is our record to date. When next we are heard of, we shall, no doubt, be winning the Marbles Championship of greater Boston.

Art and Letters

OUR class has never been excessively literary—our talents lie in other fields. Still we know our duty when we see it, and with that splendid spirit of energetic lassitude that has characterized '25 in many of its activities, we have worked away at our literary heritage from our publication-founding elders.

When we were Freshmen there was the Twig. We felt rather pleased when we saw our themes in the Twig. Our classmates read them. We even accepted a position as one of its multiple editors with the proud feeling that we now had something to put in our letters home beside pleadings for cakes, pies and money. Freshman year, moreover, two of us rose with swink and sweat to the lofty positions of Very Youngest Reporter and Next Youngest Reporter.

Sophomore year others of us joined the News. The Press Board too found from among us bright young recruits who labored to provide the fire eating newspapers of America with "copy." These found it a somewhat difficult problem in balance to make this copy sufficiently sensational and silly to win favor in the eyes of editors and still to keep Alma Mater's shawl of decency wrapped firmly about her shivering shoulders. (The R. and S. department will recite in chorus "Oh wert thou in the cauld, cauld blast, etc.")

In this year the Literary Supplement of the News was begun in an effort to revive the (to us) legendary Magazine. It has survived until the present day and may linger for years, who knows? Perhaps it may even grow into a bigger, better, broader Supplement in the hands of some more literary class than ours. People may take to writing for it voluntarily—but, peace, there speaks the utopian dreamer!

Junior year no startling events shook the tranquility of our life of belles-lettres. The shadow of approaching responsibility did not darken very greatly our proverbial "jolly" state. The keynote of the News banquet was the red of Bolshevism and to the board of 1925 was bequeathed the radical reputation of '24. Nothing in the way of unexpurgated denunciation of the status quo has appeared as yet, however, and most of the deadly looking scarlet bombs have turned out to be filled with nothing more noxious than confetti.

Our supreme literary effort—offspring of a final convulsive throe is before you. We modestly withdraw, preening our wings and rearranging our haloes self consciously in the latest style.

BELOW we submit a memorandum of plays which you (presumably) have seen during the past four years. As evidence of progress in this period we offer on succeeding pages pictures of the 1924 Fall Play, for comparison with previous work.

1921—22.

Oct. 29. Fall Pliscoda.
Three important debuts made by Misses Perrin, Hards and Cowper, in Dunsany's GOLDEN DOOM, and Barrie's ROSALIND.

Dec. 2-3; Fall Play.
Molière's LEARNED LADIES, featuring Nonie Cleveland ('23) of rosy memory.

March 10—11. Operetta.
RIGHT ABOUT FACE,—a modern West Point musical comedy, introducing on the Freshman horizon Betty Head, Rebecca Stickney, Hal Kirkham, Dorothy Brenigan, etc.

April 20. Informals.
Two one-act plays: Hudson's SHEPHERD IN THE DISTANCE, (a pantomime) and Down's MAKER OF DREAMS (Pierrot Pierrette).

June. June Play.
Most of '25 never saw it, but it was MEDEA,—Greek tragedy and Elizabeth Wilcox ('22).

1922—23.

Nov. 4. Fall Pliscoda.
Ian Hay's CRIMSON COCOANUT, with Priscilla Cowper ('25) starring, and the WELLESLEY CHAUVE-SOURIS,—much modified Balieff.

Dec. 1—2. Fall Play.
Three one-act plays: "WILL O' THE WISP,—47 Workshop; THE WASP—Russian Revolution stuff, with Nonie Cleveland, and Jean Dubbs ('25); Barrie's THE TWELVE-POUND LOOK.

March 3. Faculty Play.
TREASURE ISLAND, done with great vigor by the men of the Faculty.

March 9-10. Operetta.
THE SINGING HIGHWAYMAN. Romance. Carol Perrin, the highwayman, and Bobbie Beeman, the lovely ladye.

June 14-15. June Play.
A THOUSAND YEARS AGO—Oriental gorgeousness. Carol Woods ('25) as a Prince of Astrachan, and Priscilla Cowper as Punchinello.

1923-1924.

Dec. 15. Fall Play.

The quaint charm of POMANDER WALK, in the magnificence of Alumnae Hall.

March 21-22. Operetta.

EXIT THE VILLAIN—all about an author and his obstreperous characters, with Carol Perrin.

April 19. Pliscoda.

Five competition plays: Freshman, THE COPPER POT, by Frances Keeley ('25); Sophomore, THE TWO MARIONETTES, by Harriet Lyon ('26)—the prizewinner; Junior, ARIA DA CAPO, by Edna St. Vincent Millay—honorable mention; Senior, THE REHEARSAL, by Christopher Morley; Faculty men, FREE SPEECH, a 47 Workshop play, voted the funniest.

June. June Play.

ROMEO AND JULIET. Moonlight on Doris Dalton, ('24), Perrin, Hards, Cowper, Kent and Miles, of '25, notably.

Dec. 6. Fall Play.

The Chinese YELLOW JACKET, featuring Hards, Miles, Kent, Lidseen, of '25; Damon and Hunter, of '26; and all the rest of the cast.

March 21. Operetta.

THE KNIGHT IN POVERTY. A romantic tale of the days of King Arthur, with a damsel in distress, a knight in disguise, and other pleasant fairy-story qualities. Lois Marshall ('27), Carol Perrin ('25). Eleanor Gorham ('28) and Betty Miles ('25) in the leading parts.

The Yellow Jacket

The Yellow Jacket

(In view of the widespread discussion and criticism which the proposed celebration of Wellesley's Fiftieth Birthday has called forth, the editors of this publication feel that something must be done. While fully aware that any suggestion on their part will appear a trifle late for application in the present instance, they submit their libretto for what it's worth. Possibly, it may grace our centenary fiesta.)

It is once on a time in the Land of Faery, and the wee folk are all a-weeing (as they will). Some of the elfin crew are tripping gaily to and fro; others peep slyly hither and yon, shrilly piping "Wee Wee" The woods ring with their prankish laughter, and dear little dandelion and goldenrod nod their sleepy heads (for such are the wee seasons). When, lo, into the enchanted ring, stray, You Naughty Girl and You Dirty Boy. Affrighted, the little people flee, borne on the trusty back of Old Auntie Bumble Bee. The two innocents lie down on the mossy bank. Mr. Sandman, the sly fellow, taps them lightly on the head with his sandbag; they fall asleep.

Pythagoras, Zoroaster and Confucius are holding open forum on Olympus. (Throughout this scene, the sun is gradually setting behind the snow-capped Sierras. When finished, it commences to rise.) The great men are laughing, in a comradely way.

Enter Mr. Durant with an anti-masque of masons, builders, corner stones, etc., performing sports and antics. Mr. Durant removes his frock coat and stands revealed as the spirit of Wellesley with golden hair and Wellesley blue eyes. Tableau. Zoroaster rises solemnly and cries "Hail!" Mr. Durant (alias Spirit of W.) also rises and replies "Hail" They shake hands all round. One of the anti-masquers roguishly pulls Confucius' pigtail. He takes it very ill but is pacified when Pythagoras rises and sings Alma Mater.

Enter Spirit of the College Hall Fire with attendant flame sprites. They dance about the corner stones, interpreting spontaneous combustion. The little gnomes retaliate by throwing fire crackers about. Zoroaster rises solemnly and cries "Hail!" Spirit of Fire replies "Hail!" They shake hands. Pythagoras sings Problems.

Enter Spirit of the Fund, patting its stomach with hollow resoundings. Zoroaster rises solemnly and cries "Hail!" S. of F. replies "Hail!" They shake hands. She sits down, center stage and coughs consumptively. Enter Spirit of Campus Exchange, Deceased Millionaires, Living Millionaires, Wellesley Night, Organizations, etc., bearing many offerings which Spirit of Fund gathers into her money bag. Spirit of Legenda enters and gives an I. O. U. Pythagoras sings I'm a Little Prairie Flower. Confucius makes a speech in pidgin English. Enter Spirit of the Pageant, the deus ex machina. Parking her car up stage left, she sneaks upon poor Spirit of Fund and steals the money bag. S. of F. swoons.

You Dirty Boy wakes up and nudges You Naughty Girl. They go to sleep again. Chorus continues to sing Hosannahs. Pythagoras, Zoroaster and Confucius join hands and play Farmer in the Dell around Mr. Durant.

Enter Divine Idea of the New England Conscience attended by Chaperone Rules dressed as vestal virgins. A banner is blazed in the sky: "It does not shock us but it offends our taste." The anti masquers busy themselves with drinking, smoking, petting, murder and arson. Zoroaster rises and says "Hail!" to which the D. I. of N. E. C. cleverly replies "Coffee, cocoa or milk." Mr. Durant rejoins "Non ministrari sed ministrare," whereon Confucius leaps to his feet and leads a cheer "Service, service, rah! rah! rah!"

In conclusion, the entire cast sings "Happy birthday to you," in which they are joined by all students of Diploma grade.

1875 ~ 1925

Years have come and gone since a certain Sunday morning when Mr. Durant in a sermon on the spirit of Wellesley quoted—from Dante's Vita Nuova—the words, "Here beginneth a new life." So Wellesley's founder pronounced the formula destined to carry dreams and ideals to realization within half a century.

Almost forty years of steady growth had been marked off on Wellesley's calendar when, in nineteen hundred fourteen, the very life of the college was arrested by the great fire which destroyed College Hall in two hours. The despair following this devastating blow was, however, brief. For it proved to be only a temporarily retarding factor, ultimately a stimulus to more rapid development.

In the subsequent period, a new life began. The college, reborn, was launched on a fresh history which almost eclipses the old. The task of reconstruction was to supplant a building which housed not only three hundred students but contained recitation rooms, administrative offices, library, chapel, science laboratories and gymnasium. A restoration and endowment fund provided for three new buildings! Tower Court, Claflin and Founders Hall. Additions were made to Pomeroy and Cazenove in 1919, thereby completing the north side of the quadrangle; and in the summer of 1920 Mathewson House was built to accommodate the department of Reading and Speaking.

The exigencies of war time served to retard the work of expansion until 1923, when Alumnae Hall was completed. Parallel with building additions there have been changes in academic and social life. Numerically the teaching staff has advanced from twenty-four to a hundred fifty and the student body from seven hundred thirty-one to over fifteen hundred. In the non academic life there has been a marked tendency to large scale production; certain elements have been quite lost, as the literary entertainments once peculiar to Wellesley. The accompanying illustration gives some conception of a session of Parliament, as performed by Wellesley history students of the '80's. It is also our privilege to reproduce a photograph of the renowned 1889 Glee Club, the most noteworthy predecessor of the present organization. The Beethoven Society, once a flourishing institution, is perhaps now reincarnated in the Choir.

If the past fifty years have seen marked changes in the external Wellesley, it is none the less certain that the essential nature of the college has persisted unaltered. And in this enduring spirit lies the promise for the future.

1925 SONGS

1925 CLASS SONG.

Oh, Wellesley, Alma Mater fair
Thy daughters join once more
To add their love and loyalty
To half a century's store.
Oh, guide us, Alma Mater
That we, unfaltering too,
May hold aloft thine emblem,
And so, inspired anew,
Thro' all our lives may honor thee
To reach thy standards strive
By giving up ourselves to serve thee
Wellesley, twenty-five!

—Words by Katharine Beeman.

1925 CREW SONG.

The shadows are falling, Yallani, Yallani,
The sun sinks to sleep in the rose-glowing west.
The evening breeze steals from the caves of the night
To waken the lake from its rest.
Straight as a wind-sped arrow,
Fly swiftly, Yallani.
Leap o'er the waves to the nearing goal,
Glorious in thy pride.
Strong is thy crew and their oars unfailing,
Vict'ry awaits thee, and twenty-five.

—Words by Virginia Clay Hamilton.

MARCHING SONG.

All hail! fair Wellesley, Alma Mater glorious,
Nineteen twenty-five salutes thee.
We march to yield thee love for all we've gained
Given freely day by day.
Twenty-five! (Gaily we cheer!)
Twenty-five! (Echoing clear!)
As we march in proud array
We bear forever treasures of thy store
Of beauty deepened, truth more fine!
And unafraid, by heritage of thee,
Bound together in onward, upward striving
March through life, our grateful hearts reflecting Honor, service, ever to Wellesley!

—By Katharine Beeman.

College Portraits

I. THE ATHLETE.

She is a wholesome character found in abundance around the campus, distinguished by the nice warm white sweater which is her favorite garb. She walks with a firm, swift strut, ostentatiously upon the balls of her feet. Her cheeks gleam with the accumulated glow of a lifetime of icy showers; indeed, herein is the keynote of her philosophy. From every muscle shrieks a proud "Ha! Philistines—blush for your hot tubs."

Her nether portions spend the major part of their existence in bloomers, a custom which has induced in her a certain bouncing quality of gait. When she sallies forth skirted, there is a definite constraint in her air.

Her approach to existence is, on the whole, a trifle too robust. But in the Hygiene cosmos she has found herself. Here she is at home in a world whose salient problems are worthy methods of rope climbing and good straight backs.

Intellectually, she is conscientious, and brisk. Shelley is someone in a Lit. course to be taken like deep breathing. She usually fosters a scientific bent, thus adding a pleasantly zoological touch to brighten her outlook.

She drinks milk at breakfast, with a heartiness calculated to make the atmosphere appear rife with nascent red corpuscles, and death and destruction to the one who touches coffee.

She likes to make lots of noise, denoting merriment; to turn somersaults, indicative of animal spirits; to practice setting-up exercises, bespeaking a serious interest in life.

II. THE AESTHETE.

There is no one who appreciates more keenly than this sensitive spirit, how provincial, — bourgeois even,—college is. Just why she was dropped into it is of course, inexplicable, like a Keats in a stable. She has built up against the engulfing crassness strong defenses in which the writings of Aldous Huxley, Anatole France and H. L. Mencken are bulwarks.

She has created for herself a rarefied atmosphere in which she can, delicately, maintain the breath of life. To it she admits persons of three classes: first, those in whom she recognizes equals (possibly one or two in number), second, such as, by grace of belonging to an alien nation, can bring with them no contaminating Americanisms; third, a select few who are willing to listen.

This last group is indispensable. For the aesthete expresses herself, frequently and with unction. She feels herself to have achieved that degree of super-breeding in which the worst possible manners are not only permissible but laudable; thus she is deft in putting whom she will permanently ill at ease.

She is, above all, aloof. To attend a college event, to know the date of one even, is to sully the ermine. She goes, to be sure, with the herd, to classes. Here she demeans herself either with a withering general scorn, or, if the course be "cultural" in tone, professes an occult communion with the subject thereof, a mysterious plumbing of depths undreamt of by the mob.

She is firmly convinced that for the cultivation of that pure and magnificent being, herself, all the resources of the college, save perhaps the library, are worse than useless, and that the riff raff inhabiting the place are wholly without excuse for being save for the undying amusement which they afford her.....

III. THE CUNNING LITTLE THING.

Her size is what starts her off. Her height cannot exceed five feet one and her hair should be bobbed. She considers her natural function the fostering of the latent maternal instinct in all such portions of society as come within her reach. She is all the world's baby, and the particular cherished infant of her own "gang."

There is in the plaintive roll of her child-like eyes that which demands tender guardianship. At her best, she has a Southern accent of a cooing quality.

She is always either jumping up and down with excitement (isn't it perfec'ly won'erful?) or dissolving adorably, in drooping mouthed grief. In the one case, she must be danced with, on the other hand those naughty tears must be chased away.....

She simply doesn't understand why so many men are just wild over her.....

One of her outstanding social graces is to sit for some time with a demure profile to the audience and suddenly to turn upon them an electrifying stare of dimpling wonderment..... She has been dreaming..... oh so sweetly—far, far away.

Innocence—all innocence.....

IV. THE REALLY CONSCIENTIOUS GIRL.

The things that strike you first about her are Order and Purpose. She entered Freshman year methodically singing "Lead Kindly Light" to the beacon gleams of the Phi Beta Kappa key, and the refrain rings in her ears.

She is the one person in every class who takes the phrase "two hour assignment" seriously. By her senior year she has done so much reading that she not infrequently prompts her instructors.

Her notebook is the mirror of her soul. There is nothing that she has not taken down, dated, classified and subdivided—I-A—1-a, etc. The footprints of her college life are in its pages. No one is safe from the clutch of her busy pen that never leaks;—poets, philosophers, preachers—alike find themselves condensed into her resolutely legible sheets. They have, indeed, attained to a certain immortality. She never throws a note away.

She goes in for "college life" as systematically as she does everything else—that is, as much of it as she can fit into the schedule of existence, tacked up in front of her desk next to "An if for Girls."……

Her relations with members of the faculty are characterized by reverence rather than intimacy…..

When she graduates she will boast about how she once was the noisiest girl on the corridor and almost received a warning from the proctor…

V. THE MERRIEST WIDOW.

College is to her a starting point for week ends,—mysterious rites lasting from Friday to Tuesday. In the interim she is always either arming herself for the next or recuperating from the last. During this period she attends a few classes, artfully chosen with reference to their temporal location; she is carelessly sporty in attire; she has a marcel, a manicure, a facial, a golden glint and a few moments of sleep (she prides herself upon a Napoleonic capacity for insomnia) ; she plays bridge for at least a quarter of the day; she takes all possible meals in the village; she interviews the dean and reports that she has put her in her place.

It is her proud vaunt that a Sunday sun has never set upon her in Wellesley. Many days before the Sabbath she has left, dazzlingly clothed in an outfit worthy of the haughtiest chorine—departed this dull cloister for a hypothetical realm inhabited by men in raccoon coats.....

She sedulously keeps her conversation free from any taint of intellectual scope beyond that of an eleven year old child or a well meaning shop-girl; yet it is generally agreed that, since she apparently studies not at all, and yet remains in college and off probation—she must have a brain concealed somewhere.....

Her remarks are succulent with a racy slang which constitutes the major part of her vocabulary.....

She finds gum chewing completely recherché.

All the nice girls in her house suspect her of smoking, drinking (and —who knows? —worse things).....

Disgraceful creature.....

VI. A GOOD EGG.

She began, the first day of her Freshman year, to be a real college girl. Her initial steps in this direction were to purchase a Wellesley banner, seal and cushion, and a few select Maxfield Parish drawings. Her next move was to organize a "crew"—that is a suitable collection of bosom friends, a dozen or so in number, qualified to borrow one another's clothing and more or less intimate toileterie. She now proceeded to memorize all the words to all the college songs, and tunes, including tenors.

Her next move was on the subject of names. She rapidly conned all the nicknames of all her classmates and as many others as possible. Their impression was indelible. Throughout her college career it is her pride to meet one and all with a merry and intimate greeting and a hearty slap on the back.....

By her junior and senior years she has captured a sufficient number of offices of various kinds to enable her to supplement her unquenchable enthusiasm with a certain self-importance known as "dignity." It is her ambition to be so thoroughly submerged in extra-curriculum activities as to justify a perpetual breathlessness. Withal, she absorbs a certain amount from her courses; but "how do people have time to read!" (delivered with hauteur). She manages, on the whole to maintain a comfortable state of ignorance which she capitalizes as humorous.....

Indeed her roguishness is one of her strongest points. She is mistress of a unique type of rambunctiousness.

She is, to herself, significant as a pillar of the college, a hail fellow—and a Fine American Girl.....

VII. RAISON D'ETRE.

The student body is not wholly constituted of morons and braggarts. It has, in truth some claim to its name.

We do not know what to call her, —this scholar. Therefore we have named her the raison d'etre of the college. For that she is.

She has succeeded in finding some branch of learning which belongs peculiarly to her. This has colored her outlook, —vivified her existence.

She has discovered an intellectual life, not self-consciously nor with the blaring of trumpets, —but quietly and with deep pleasure.....

Her interests may be diverse, but there is in them a certain unity, —making her endeavor purposeful.

She does not wear a badge; it is her chief distinction that she has discovered work which is to her joyful.

It has given her a peculiar potency, a mental vigor. In a sense, college has blazed for her a path through the life of the mind.....

She exists, this scholar, in varying degrees in all those who have gained, in college, intellectual enthusiasms, great or small, frequent or rare.

As such,—she is the justification of the higher learning.....

CHARLES H. WILLARD, PRESIDENT COVER DESIGNS SUBMITTED

College Annual Corporation

Printing, Plate Making, Binding

New York

The pleasure has been an unusual one in producing this 1925 Legenda complete, as it is the realization of what a College Annual should represent.

It is the first College book ever produced in Gravure on Vellum stock, and is in refreshing contrast to the more or less commercial half tone reproductions on shiny paper.

The Editorial Staff are to be congratulated for the courage of their convictions in starting something new, and for their confidence in us, we are grateful.

An Elizabeth Arden Treatment is based on three fundamental steps—Cleansing, Toning, Nourishing—with Elizabeth Arden's Cleansing Cream, Skin Tonic, and Orange Skin Food. These should be a part of your daily care of the skin at home. Ask at the toilet goods counter for a copy of Elizabeth Arden's book "The Quest of the Beautiful," which describes the correct treatment of the skin according to her famous method.

For the final touch of chic, Elizabeth Arden recommends that you use her Babani Perfumes, which she imports from Paris for her fashionable clientele.

Elizabeth Arden's Venetian Toilet Preparations and Babani Perfumes are on sale in Wellesley at the shop of

A ZOOLOGICAL DITTY

While I was out a-hunting with my microscope one day,
I caught a wee, young paramaecium as he passed my way;
I penned him in a corner in a sunny, nice location,
And talked to him in soothing tones to calm his agitation.
And now he's really very tame, and frolics round the slide
With an entertaining motion, half a wiggle, half a glide.
I wash and brush the tiny chap to keep him free from dirt,
And I made for him a bonnet and a little ruffled shirt;
I trim his cilia neatly every time they grow too long,
And stroke his ectoplasm—while I croon a little song.
For though he acts so sort of fierce and restless, on the whole
He's only playful, bless his heart—I mean, his vacuole!

The bold Secant of Angle A
Was rambling down his curve,
When all at once he saw a sight
Enough to shake his nerve.

A dreadful Line was pressing down
Upon a Tangent fair,
A-choking of her while she gasped
And struggled hard for air.

"Ah hah! It is my function now
This Tangent maid to try
And save," quoth Secant, whereupon
He seized a piece of Π,
And hurled it full against the head
Of that obnoxious Line-us*
Who stumbled o'er the axis line
And instantly was minus!

The Tangent and the Secant then
Rejoicing made their way
Into the faroff Infinite.
And there they are to-day.
